

A conflict of interest is defined as a situation in which the impartiality of an employee could be undermined because of a clash between the professional interests of the agencies and clients represented. Due to the part-time nature of most Families Plus jobs, a conflict of interest could easily arise. The Board of Directors will review outside employment of staff and will advise the employee in writing if the outside employment poses a conflict of interest to the organization.